Today we all know how to find the Supreme Deity inside ourselves.

But we weren’t always so enlightened. Back in the day our species was spiritually lost. We had not developed the technological tools to determine the inner coordinates of Heaven and Hell. We did not possess the Holy Mirror with which to see the Face of God in our own countenance. Nor did we know how to use the Divine Compass to locate the Gates of Hell in our darker aspirations. Nor did we know how to employ even one of the 14 varieties of deathoscopes to discern the visage of the Prince of Darkness in our hearts.

In short, we were lost. Miserable wayfarers, we stumbled about blindly. Of course, we knew about science and technology. We dazzled ourselves with our own creative genius. But we were dazzled through a misapprehension of the scientific method. We employed knowledge, but without Truth. We experienced lucidity, but without Understanding.

We were pushbutton creatures, living machines without the slightest idea of where to being a true search for the deity within.

Here’s another metaphor: Each of us was a living magic lantern, unknowingly projecting our inner movies onto the Earth and even the stars above, certain the ultimate truths we occasionally glimpsed in the lives of the prophets and saints did not come from within but rather the back of beyond. We were certain that if we looked hard enough and in the right place, we would finally find – perhaps after death, but finally nonetheless – the Supreme Deity who is in charge of all His creation.

The living magic lanterns were projecting so many different movies all at once that it was hard to make sense of it all. So people started classifying their projections by genre. They called these genres “religions.” And they built special theaters in which to enjoy their favorite genre stories with other people who recognized the common elements of their own inner movies. They called these theaters by many names: Temples, synagogues, sanctuaries, chapels.

Occasionally a genre would fall out of favor, and people would quit believing in them. They called these genres “myths.” Sometimes people would continue to believe in a genre that others called a myth. This created a sense of unease. How can anyone believe in a genre other than the One True Movie, (i.e., the Supreme Deity)? The answer was simple: these “myths” were false genres of the Dark One. They were Evil. They must be stamped out.

That is why humanity used to have so many wars.

So the world turned for many centuries, each believer going to the theater of their choice to enjoy the genre of their choice. They were happy, expressing their unique and superior love for the Supreme Deity – and building increasingly sophisticated and deadly weapons to kill those who insisted on adhering to myths and following the Dark One.

The few humans who suggested the possibility that all of the genres were myths and God might actually live within were called “heretics.” They were dragged out of the theaters and burned at the stake.

When humans weren’t busy killing heretics, they continued to stamp out myths. They waged wars on the false genres, fighting in the name of their own Supreme Deity.

Humans spent so much time and expended so many resources stamping out the myths and extinguishing the heretics that they utterly neglected the idea of a technological advancement that would allow them to do away with the many competing genres and discover that the actual Supreme Deity didn’t dwell in a theater but lived within.

Humans would have most likely continued on this ill-conceived path until they had completely annihilated their entire species if not for the timely intervention of the Cicadians, one of the 35 extraterrestrials of the soul. They arrived among us from the comatose milieu, bringing the science and technology we needed to recognize the falsity of the competing genres, understand the metaphorical truth of all myths and experience the Supreme Deity within ourselves.

We owe it all to them. After all, it was the Cicadians who came from the back of beyond to bring us the holy Jah, the 4.4-million-character word that means “god within.” Let us speak the holy noun now, in reverent prayer to the Supreme Deity:
